

ST. JOHN'S UNIVERSITY

Department of Psychology

Free Intervention Study!

Are you a parent of a child with an autism spectrum disorder (ASD) or a developmental disability?

Would you like free parent training?

At St. John's University, we are conducting a research study on the effectiveness of a group parent training program for parents of children with autism spectrum disorder (ASD) and other developmental disabilities (DD). We are currently seeking parents to volunteer to participate in this intervention program.

This study might be right for you if...

- You and your child live in the same home.
- Your child with ASD or DD displays challenging behaviors such as tantrums, aggression, self-injury, property destruction, or noncompliance.
- Your child is between the ages of 3 and 6 years old.

The potential benefits of the study are...

- You may receive parent training free of charge.
- You may increase your knowledge of your child's challenging behaviors and strategies that have been shown to be effective for addressing challenging behaviors.
- The parent training program may also benefit you by helping you to reduce your child's challenging behaviors and improve your family's quality of life.

For more information on this study or to request a screening packet, please contact the principal investigator, Dr. Lauren Moskowitz, at St. John's University at (718) 990-6418 or via email at MoskowiL@stjohns.edu.

Thank you!